CANTON, Mass.— In its just-released rankings of the best high schools in Massachusetts, U.S. News & World Report named Canton High School the 54th best of 437 high schools, and 45th among high schools in the metro Boston area. The magazine notes that 60 percent of CHS students take Advanced Placement classes and 96 percent of Canton High School students graduate. The news publication evaluated 18,000 high schools across the country, and Canton placed No. 1484.

“This recognition in U.S. News & World Report validates the hard work of our teachers and students,” said Jeff Sperling, Canton High School principal. “The success of our high school reflects the strength of our entire district, with its focus on leveraging high-quality instructional practices in the classroom, providing valuable teacher development, and social-emotional learning. We continue to strive for improvements and maintain high standards for everyone in our school community”. Canton received an overall score of 91.61 out of a possible 100 points, just 8.11 points behind top-ranked Boston Latin School.

“I want to commend everyone at Canton High School for this well-deserved recognition,” said Canton Public Schools Superintendent Derek Folan. “This is a proud day for the students, teachers and staff of our district, who are committed to excellence in the classroom and in life.”
