

March Madness A Tournament of Books

What is it?

March Madness is a tournament to decide which book JFK thinks is the best! Sixteen books have been selected for this year's tournament, including the winning book from last year. The books are listed below and on the March Madness link on the JFK website.

Who does it?

All JFK students and families should read as many books from the Sweet Sixteen list as we can. Can you read all 16???

When is it?

We will read these books throughout the month of March! Each week students should try to read the books that are competing in a bracket. On Mondays in March we will announce the books that are moving on in the tournament.

Where do we read?

Students can read anywhere! Students can find the books in our JFK library, at the Canton town library, and via links on the JFK webpage, "March Madness: A Tournament of Books". Your teacher may even read some of the books in class!

How do I vote?

Choose two books in a bracket, and start reading! Then go to the JFK website and click on "March Madness: A Tournament of Books". Get ready to vote by clicking on the voting link.
